There wasn't as much class to last night's crowd as that which turned out to see the Willard-Moran bout, but there was more enthusiasm. The "regulars" who had to sit in the galleries last week were back in their accustomed places in the pit.

The throng sat contentedly through the semi-finals and most of the preliminaries whetting their appetites for the main event. No ringside betting was in evidence. COLUMBIA COXSWAIN RESIGNS FROM CREW

M. Thomas, the midget coxswain who steered the Columbia varsity crew to a victory over Yale last fall, resigned as a member of the Blue and White navy yesterday. Thomas is a sophomore. He was coxswain of the freshman eight at Poughkeepsie last year and impressed Coach James C. Rice so that he jumped to the varsity boat last fall, supplanting Fogg and Paddock, both coxswains of two years experience. Rice's poor showing last year, it is said, was traceable in a measure to poor coxswains. Pad-dock had great difficulty in keeping a straight course, and really lost the race for the Child's cup against Princetor
